He trained the non-teaching staff through live demo of working on MIS Software. They are talk the Data Analysis is a task which is performed in MIS. MIS and data analysis is an essential and basic need of any business organization required to perform their functions efficiently and effectively. It generally refers to how an individual, group or business organization analyzes, implements and manages the system to develop information to enhance business performance. The main purpose of MIS and data analysis is to give Principal feedback about their own performance; so the top management can monitor the Institute as a whole. The information showed by MIS generally shows "actual" data over "planned" results; thus it measures the progress against goals. MIS reports reduce the decision making time as well as downtime for actionable items. It shows an overall picture of the company as well.

Second Day session was conducted by Prof. R.B. Anap, ASC College, Kolhar. In his session discussed about the MIS and Data Analysis also ensures that all the decision making groups have access to the available data so that decision-making process does not hit snags before its complete.

MIS and data analysis training would help you to land a job as an MIS & data analyst. When Institutes need help enhancing their present information system or creating a new one, they turn to the expertise of management information systems and data analysts. MIS and data analysts mostly examine and analyze how an college/Institute/organization staff uses information, what tools they have available and how they want to improve their tools. Then analysts suggest changes to existing processes so that information flows quickly and efficiently. Mostly, they also implement the latest hardware technology and software applications.
